TIME:12.30 p.m. – 1.30 p.m.

VENUE: SAN JOSE SEMINAR HALL

On March 18th, 2022, the department of computer science had a guest lecture by Mr. P. Graceson Tony on the topic "Online Employability and Work from Home Opportunities," which was organized by the department of computer science. Students found the guest speaker to be energizing and stimulating. The students spent more time in this session delving further into the cash flow quadrant. The session inspired them to carve out some time for themselves in their daily lives. The lecturer was enthusiastic in his explanations to the students. Even though the session was only an hour long, the students learned about additional opportunities for working from home. The interaction between the lecturer and the students was the most engaging element. They learned about new technological software in the computer world's expansion from the lecture, which will be useful in their future jobs. Finally, students learned more about online employability and work-from-home opportunities as a result of this session. For the students, this lecture was a valuable source of knowledge.
