*Skulking all the way throttling the whip
Quenching the never happened lust
Soul hath been a wrecked ship
Wanderers along with the numbness of thy bust
Thou art sentenced to be buried in the illicit tomb
Ah! Aching my long-weighed utterance;
Remembered the fathom of thy succumb
Spilling the Womb of world's ignorance
Pardon the 'insatiably curious child' in me
Now bidding the departure lane
The curfew shall not encompass thee.
The Cathedral turn'd insane
Not of the path that treads
But of the chantings we had
Let me sleep now
Stolen Nights
Broken Frames
Taking the whole breath out of my legs.*

The Petrichor of Love

G.Priya

*Idle on the window sill
I peer outside
The October heat ruins my mellowness
My musing airs flame
the love volcano inside Raging fires-vacuum or plenitude* poems and stories. She believes peace in solitude and love in agony.
